

Rare Birds of Vancouver Island:
June 1, 2024: 8th Revised Edition
Compiled by Rick Toochin and Don Cecile.

Area Covered

This is a list of all known, published, and unpublished records of casual and accidental species that have been reported on and around Vancouver Island. This list of records covers all the land mass of Vancouver Island from Cape Scott at the northern most point of Vancouver Island to East Sooke Park which is the southern most point of land on Vancouver Island. The rare bird records found within this document also cover the waters that surround all of Vancouver Island. On the west coast this extends out to the 200-mile limit of what is considered Canadian waters. On the northern part of Vancouver Island this extends up into Queen Charlotte Sound down the Johnstone Strait to the middle of the Strait of Georgia south to the International Boundary and west through the Juan de Fuca Strait following the International Boundary back out to the 200-mile edge. The islands included on this list area includes Triangle Island and the Scott Islands at the northwest tip of the island. The list also includes the islands off the northeast coast of Vancouver Island such as Hope Island, Nigei Island, Hurst Island south to Malcolm Island and Hanson Island. Then the boundary travels south through Johnstone Strait including Sonora Island, Stuart Island, Quadra Island, Maurelle Island, Reed Island, Cortes Island, Martina Island, Hernando Island, Savary Island, Mitlenatch Island, Harwood Island, Texada Island and Lasquetti Islands in the northern Strait of Georgia. At the southern most part of the area covered is Mandarte Island in the Juan De Fuca Strait plus all islands found off the west coast of Vancouver Island. This a general list and will be added to throughout the future as more information becomes available. If you have a sighting, you wish to have added please send the information to the contact the authors.

Introduction

Writing a list of rare birds is no easy task and, in this case, extensive research was conducted to find all the records that are found within this document. The casual and accidental bird records listed in this document include historical records, specimen records, cited observations from peer reviewed literature such as the Birds of B.C. Volumes 1-4, photographic records and accepted sightings found in the literature as well as good observations that have been communicated privately over the years to the authors from reliable observers. Pain staking effort has been made by the authors to show where the information that pertains to any given bird record was found so that the reader of this document can go and read the original document. Both online Island bird chat groups were extensively researched for sightings and have been thoroughly cited giving the observers and authors of postings proper credit whenever possible. This document has a total of 210 species that are accidental or casual in occurrence on Vancouver Island. Confirmed records appear first and are documented either by photographs, specimens, tape recordings or by well written field notes. Accepted records seen by a single observer are treated as a sight record (sr). There are 14 species on the list that fall under the category of Hypothetical because they are either currently under review or haven't fully been documented as a definitive record in the region using the previously mentioned criteria. In many cases these records are new for the Provincial List of Birds for B.C and are called Hypothetical only because they fail to have a photograph, specimen, recording of the birds call or song or do not have extensive field notes that document such a rarity. Please note the use of the word Hypothetical is not meant as a derogatory term and is used to distinguish selected records that do not have all the requirements set out in the document to be called a confirmed record. Below each species name is a list of records showing confirmed records then any Hypothetical records for that species. This List has by no means every record that has been sighted on Vancouver Island and there is room to add more. If information on new records comes to light the authors will be happy to add the information to this document. However, we require basic information to add records to this list such as the number of birds seen, the location, date of occurrence, observers' names, how it was documented (ex: by photograph) and duration of the birds stay. Without basic information such as this it is impossible to add a record to this list as it does not meet our requirements. If a record presents itself that is too vague or lacks the critical information requirements, we ask for it will unfortunately be left off this list until such time as solid information can be acquired. Since about the year 2002 many records of rarities have been digitally photographed which makes figuring out if the identity of a bird is correct much easier. Observers are always encouraged to ethically photograph rare birds, but also to write up details if a photograph isn't quite good enough to document a record or if photographs are not possible. Observers are also encouraged to report such birds and to document them as best as is possible. A list of references is provided at the end of the document. If you have any comments, additional observations or questions please contact E-Fauna B.C.

Species Covered: Rare Regular

The following species are rare in the Vancouver Island Checklist Area. There is usually at least one report a year and in years multiple sightings. There are a few species that have historically bred or still do breed locally in the Vancouver Island Checklist Area. Asterisks mark these species. Some of these species were once abundant but are now extremely localized or rare in occurrence. In some cases, there are species that are suspected to be breeding in the region, but to date there has been no nest found. These species have an asterisk in brackets (*) after the species name. A species that was introduced onto Vancouver Island is marked on the following list by [I]. There are a few species that have historically bred but are now extirpated from the Vancouver Island Checklist Area (or in other words extinct in the local region). These species have an asterisk * followed by a [X] symbol after the bird's name. In a few cases there were species introduced to Vancouver Island and for a time were successful but are now extinct locally. Many of the species on this list occur as migrants in a narrow period making them hard to find and often in a very selective habitat. These birds should always be documented when encountered, as they are rare at any time of year in the Vancouver Island Checklist Area.

Species Covered: Accidental/Casual

The following species are considered casual or accidental in the Vancouver Island Checklist Area. These species are very unusual to the region. To be considered a species of accidental occurrence there has only been 1-2 records in total or in each season. To be considered a species of casual occurrence there have only been between 3-10 records historically, often occurring at a particular time of year, but they occur less than once or in some cases a few times in a ten-year period. In the case of an accidental species there is often only a single record or at most a couple of records with the occurrences of a species going several decades or much longer before reoccurring. For any casual or accidental species to be put on this list they are considered far out of range, extremely rare in the defined checklist area for Vancouver Island or in a few cases the species were once easily found in our region, but due to ecological changes are now almost impossible to find in the region. These birds should always be documented when encountered, as they are extremely unusual at any time of year in the Vancouver Island Checklist Area.
